

11/8 OCPT Meetup - New Rules for OCP Certification

We have invited Steve Helvie from the OCP Foundation to talk with OCPT members

The Open Compute Project has been increasingly influencing the data center hardware industry in the past five to six years, mainly due to the active participation of world-renowned cloud service providers and the efforts of Taiwan companies. Over the past few years, there are still many companies seeking to join the ranks of OCP product design, hoping to create more business opportunities, but never able to gain a stable foothold. Therefore, the OCP Foundation has re-drawn rules and is looking forward to more companies to join in. The OCP Foundation VP of Channel - International OCP Mr. Steve Helvie will explain the new certification rules for Taiwan companies, enabling Taiwan companies to participate in OCP technology evolution through their own R & D capabilities and create business opportunities for future data centers.

- The Open Compute Project has been increasingly influential in the data center hardware industry for the past five to six years, largely due to the active participation of the world's leading cloud service providers and the dedication of Taiwan companies. Over the past few years, there are still many companies want to join the ranks of OCP product design, create more business opportunities, but were never able gain a foothold inside. Therefore, the OCP Foundation has re-drawn the rules and is looking forward to more manufacturers to join in. The new rules and membership rights will allow Taiwan companies to participate in OCP technology evolution through their own research and development capabilities and to create business opportunities for future data centers.
- For this event we especially invited Mr. Steve Helvie, VP of Channel - International OCP from the OCP Foundation, to explain the new certification rules to Taiwan companies. If your company is interested in joining the open community, you are welcome to join the OCPT Meetup to learn about the new rules of the OCP community; we look forward to working with you to create a new impetus for the industry!
